Q.1 During the Second World War from 1939 to 1945, Britain and its allies fought to defeat fascist forces in many European Union countries. In the course of this, the British people suffered human and material losses.

In leaving the European Union (EU), the European Commission want Britain to pay an exit bill to cover outstanding financial obligations to other countries in the EU.

Given Britain's losses during the Second World War, if Britain has to pay a bill or payment in leaving the European Union, which of the following actions should Britain take?
